PREFACE

In 1989 Tivertonians recognized the need for a comprehensive plan that would protect the many unique natural features of their surroundings, while providing for and directing the form and location of future growth.

Town residents appreciate the rural and small town qualities that Tiverton possesses and want to ensure that the town's historical development as a series of picturesque hamlets dependent on farming and fishing remains evident into the future.

Throughout the planning process, public participation was encouraged. From this community involvement, a consensus plan gradually emerged that represents a wide variety of viewpoints and visions which will guide Tiverton into the future, and ensure that the town continues to look ahead and plan together.
